During the second quarter of 2022, the Long Island real estate market continued to experience record low inventory with elevated demand, keeping average sales prices high. All in all, total sales were down nearly 11.5 percent, and sales volume declined 3.7 percent year-over-year. Furthermore, inventory scarcity triggered multiple bid scenarios, contributing to a compelling decline for days on the market for most submarkets.

In Nassau County, the average sales price increased nearly 10.5 percent while total sales declined 13.5 percent. Days on the market dipped 24.2 percent. Further east, Suffolk County experienced a similar scenario. The average sales price rose by 7 percent, and total sales dwindled by nearly 10 percent. Here too, days on the market shrunk nearly 20 percent.

In Nassau and Suffolk, listings priced at $3 million and over saw a 7 percent decrease in days on the market with the average year-over-year sales price increasing in both Nassau and Suffolk Counties. While it increased only slightly by 1 percent in Nassau County, Suffolk County saw a 22 percent increase. Nassau's luxury market seems to be rebounding slightly with a 5.9 percent increase in sales compared to the same time the previous year. On the other hand, Suffolk saw 11.8 percent decrease in luxury sales year-over-year.

By and large, Q2 data demonstrates that the Long Island market continues to remain a destination for buyers in all price ranges in 2022. Looking ahead, buyers will remain plentiful in Q3, keeping average sales prices high and potentially inspiring sellers to list.
